Gov. Cooper, state senator set to speak on funding needs for class size mandate

WNCN

RALEIGH, N.C. (WNCN) — Today, two lawmakers are talking about the new law that mandates smaller class sizes. Some say there's something missing to make this law effective. Right now that "something" is money. Later today, Gov. Roy Cooper and a state senator out of Wake County are scheduled ...

Cooper the 'Jobs Governor'? Depends on how you count

WRAL.com

Roy Cooper reached the one-year milestone of his term last month, his press office busied itself with a string of news releases touting hiring across North Carolina. A logistics firm planned to bring 140 jobs to Cumberland County. An equipment company in Burke County would soon take on 187 more ...

Gov. Cooper should lead on pipeline

The Wilson Times

Roy Cooper favors the construction of the Atlantic Coast Pipeline, a 600-mile project connecting natural-gas generation in West Virginia to natural-gas consumers in Virginia and North Carolina. But I'm not entirely sure. Two of Cooper's cabinet secretaries have sent conflicting signals, and the governor ...

General Assembly Session Has Slim Agenda, Also Open-Ended

U.S. News & World Report

Roy Cooper's picks to the Utilities Commission — and water quality legislation are expected to come up. But parliamentary actions are expected to keep the work session running after Wednesday in case other issues surface. GOP legislators want to be ready in case they're asked by federal judges to ...

State lawmakers return with cloudy agenda

WRAL.com

Raleigh, N.C. — State lawmakers return to Raleigh Wednesday for an extra session, their fourth since ending their regular session last July. But it's still unclear what they'll take up or how long the session will last. Nearly anything is possible thanks to the wide-open parameters lawmakers set for this ...

Smaller K-3 classes in NC? Sure, but the state must pay for the teachers

News & Observer

Roy Cooper, once again, demonstrates common sense on the issue. The governor says the mandatory lowering of class sizes should be either phased in or delayed to get school systems used to it, and that legislators ought to pay for what they've ordered. "I believe," Cooper said, "smaller class size can ...

Send a message on class-size mandate

Lexington Dispatch

The resolution asks the state legislature to phase in the class-size reductions so school systems can better address the challenges over multiple years and to fully fund the plan. Those are reasonable requests and mirror what Gov. Roy Cooper has asked legislators to do when they return to Raleigh this ...
